

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
PREFACE	v
INTRODUCTION	vii
CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS	ix
Chapter
I. THE ROLE OF HOUSING IN SOCIETIES UNDERGOING TRANSITION	1
II. POPULATION	3
A. Population development 1980-1994	3
B. Internal migration	3
C. Emigration	3
D. Household formation	3
III. HOUSING QUALITY AND CONSTRUCTION OF NEW DWELLINGS	5
A. The existing dwelling stock	5
B. New housing construction	6
C. Housing supply	6
D. Forms of tenure	7
E. Restitution and privatization	8
F. Land available for new housing construction	8
IV. HOUSING ECONOMICS AND AFFORDABILITY	10
A. Housing and the national economy	10
B. Housing economics 1980-1994	11
C. Housing credit systems	12
D. Affordability of housing 1990-1994	13
E. Subsidies and allowance systems	14
F. Homelessness and social need for housing	15
V. THE LEGAL FRAMEWORK	16
A. General	16
B. Legal development in Bulgaria since the start of the transformation in 1989	16
C. Constitutional framework and constitutional rights	16
D. Ownership and tenure	18
E. Housing finance and credit systems	19
F. Procedural questions and legal infrastructure	19
VI. INSTITUTIONAL FRAMEWORK AND DECISION-MAKING PROCESSES	21
A. General	21
B. Central government institutions	21
C. Local government institutions and responsibilities	22
D. The greater municipality of Sofia	22
E. Owners and tenants associations	26
F. Structure of the building industry	26
 ANNEXES
I. Social housing policy in central and eastern Europe with particular reference to Bulgaria	29
II. Directory of authorities and principal organizations related to the housing sector	41
III. Legislation related to housing policy in the Republic of Bulgaria	43
IV. References	44

TABLES

1. In-country migration, 1980-1993	3
2. Persons per household, 1985 and 1992	4
3. Dwelling production, 1980-1994	6
4. Average floor space of new dwellings in the private and public sector, 1980-1994	6
5. Dwellings per 1,000 inhabitants, 1980-1994	7
6. Persons per room, 1985-1994	7
7. Tenure structure of the housing stock, 1993	8
8. Tenure forms in multi-family housing stock, 1994	8
9. Restituted housing by end-1994	8
10. Economic growth in selected European countries in transition, 1992-1996	10
11. Investment in selected countries in transition	10
12. Investment in housing in some central and east European countries	11
13. Total investment in housing as share of GDP, 1990-1993	11
14. New housing credits, 1993	11
15. Private investment as share of total investment in dwelling construction, 1980-1994	11
16. General inflation and inflation of house prices, 1990-1994	12
17. Average property tax rate for a housing unit, 1993	12
18. Loans for the construction and purchase of housing, 1991-1994	13
19. Affordability of housing, 1985-1994	14
20. Output of the construction materials industry	27
21. Building and construction industry output by sector	27
22. Output of basic products in the construction materials industry	27
23. Gross building and construction industry product and its share of GDP	27

FIGURES

I. Population development, 1980-1994	3
II. Number of households, 1985-1992	3
III. Number of dwelling units, 1980-1993	5
IV. Dwelling stock by year of construction, 1993	5
V. Dwelling stock by type of building and tenure, 1993	5
VI. Standard of dwelling stock, 1995	6
VII. Average construction time for new dwellings, 1980-1994	6
VIII. Households per occupied dwelling unit, 1985-1992	7
IX. Proportion of vacant housing units, 1994	7
X. Living floor space per person, 1980-1994	7
XI. GDP per capita according to 1993 prices and US$ exchange rate	10
XII. Housing as share of total output of the construction industry, 1980-1994	11
XIII. Consumer prices, construction costs, house prices and nominal and real income per capita, 1990-1994	11
XIV. Rent-to-income, 1990-1994	14
XV. The Ministry of Regional Development and Construction—Organizational chart	24
XVI. The Greater Municipality of Sofia—Administrative structure	25
XVII. Sofia Local Authority/Administrative structure for housing	26
XVIII. Structure of the building industry in European countries	26